Shall We Have a Republican Nomince for Judge in this City?

Ws published, a few days since, an address to the electors of this city favoring the relilection of Judge Ludlow to the position he now holds. and signed by a large number of the members of the bar. Many of the signers are recognized Republicans, and the names generally are those of persons having weight in the community. It is not our purpose to say anything in derogation of the arguments used by these gentlemen in favor of "securing and retaining an upright, intelligent, and experienced judiciary." The end proposed is one which, without any great stretch of charity, all good citizens may be supposed to have at heart. The only question is whether the reclection of Judge Ludlow is the only or the best means of securing this end? And upon this point we beg leave to suggest that the opinions of the members of the bar who have signed the paper in question are not to be taken as conclusive. The people at large are quite as much interested in the character of the judiciary as are the lawyers; and their judgment in regard to the qualifications of judicial officers is in many respects more likely to be correct than is that of members of the legal profession. We are not even willing to take this address as conclusive evidence of the real sentiments of the bar itself. It is a very easy thing to get signatures to a paper of this sort. Many men would feel a delicacy or reluctance at refusing to sign it, especially as it pledges nobody to anything - not even to voting for the person recommended in it.

But, in any event, we are opposed to the tacit assumption of this address, that the intelligence, purity, and efficiency of the judiciary can be secured in this instance only by the election of Judge Ludlow. Is there in the city of Philadelphia only this one man who has the capacity, the acquirements, and the integrity to make a good Associate Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, Quarter Sessions, etc. ? We do not believe it. We could name a dozen members of the bar in whose hands we would be quite as willing to place the decision of questions affecting property, person, or life itself as in those of the present incumbent.

But we are told that Judge Ludlow has had great experience as a judge. Grant it. Experience is a good thing. It has its advantages; but it has also its drawbacks. It is not an unmixed good. There are dangers, and grave ones, attending it. Read again Judge Woodward's able letter upon this topic. There is the opinion of one who has observed carefully, and knows whereof he speaks. He puts the evils of judicial experience above it, blessings He says:- "An observation of many years has led me to think that the public loses more by the infirmities of advancing age, and the perfunctory routine into which Judges fall, than is gained by long experience."

It should not be forgotten that some of the best law ever declared from the bench, some of the most ably argued decisions, some of the most noble enunciations of justice, have been made by men to whose shoulders the judicial ermine was yet new; while on the other hand some of the most infamous decisions recorded in history, some of the most outrageous attacks upon the fundamental principles of lawand some of the most deadly assaults upon justice, have been made by judges who had sat long upon the bench, and who were even then tottering upon the verge of the tomb! A good judge needs to be a man well versed in the science of the law, of a dispassionate and judicial east of mind, studious, patient, and industrious, but, above all, of those exalted moral sentiments which make him a worshipper o justice, a defender of innocence, a protector of the feeble, a refuge for the down-trodden and oppressed. A man who possesses these qualifications, we care not if he have never set for an hour upon the bench, has all the elements of the able and incorruptible judge.

But it is said that we should keep politics out of the judiciary. What is meant by this? Are we to elect judges who have no political opinions? If so, where shall we find them; and when found, what would they be worth Has Judge Ludlew no political opinions? Has he never expressed them? Has he never sought to influence the community by them Or is it meant that Judges should not carry their political opinions with them on to the bench? But if such opinions are honestly entertained, hew can a man help carrying them on to the bench? Some of the funda mental political issues of the day refer not to policies, but to principles. They involve questions of constitutional construction. When such questions come before the judiciary, as they constantly are doing, how can the judges, in deciding them, avoid being influenced by their own political views? They cannot. Or is it meant that judges should not be nominated in the usual manner by party conventions? But that depends altogether upon the character of the nominations made. If good men are nominated, is there any harm in their being put before the people in that way? It is the product turned out that gives character to the machine. Conventions are but a means of ascertaining the popular will; and when they fairly do that, there is nothing obnoxious about them. Both the great parties cial position in the Commonwealth. Aside from the political opinions expressed in the two platforms, is either of the distinguished nominees in any manner compromised by the fact of having been thus selected? Will either of them, if elected, be less likely to make a good judge? But if party nominations are not objectionable in the case of the Supreme Judge, why should they be in this case?

But there are positive considerations which in our opinion, render it proper that the Republicans of this city should nominate and elect their own candidate for judge. We are still in the midst of a great national conflict for the establishment of what, as Republicans, we believe to be sound political principles, essential to the well-being of the republic. We cannot afford to jeopardize the discipline and integrity of our party, and thus to hazard the bests interests of the country itself, by going to the enemy for our candidates. We are not willing to stand up before the people and virtually admit that we have not in the city of Philadelphia a competent Republican candidate for the office of Associate Judge. We have in our ranks able jurists, men learned in the law, who are abundantly qualified to fill the position with honor to themselves and with satisfaction to the people. We are opposed to proscribing these men because they are Republicans. The Republican party does not need to go outside of its own ranks to find suitable candidates for any office within the gift of the people. We are opposed to elevating into power notorious and avowed Democrats, who will use the very prestige and influence which their position gives them with the people in denouncing and rendering odious the policy and doctrines of the Republican party. We are abundantly able to elect a member of our own political household, and we ought to do it. Let our nominating convention select a candidate worthy of the position, and the people will ratify their action at the polls.

How We Cught to Treat the "Poor Indian."

FROM all accounts which come to us from the frontier, there seems to be no conclusion left us but to decide in favor of a vigorous prosecution of the war against the Indians. We have little sympathy with the maudlin sentimentality which would discourse on the wrongs of the aborigines, and place the white men in the attitude of the assailants. The question whether the discoverers of America ever had any right to the soil has been settled by possession. Whether or not Miles Standish, Lord Baltimore, and William Penn were trespassers or not, and whether or not the Indians have had many wrongs heaped upon them, is a question of ethics, interesting to philosophers, but of no practical importance to the American people. We have learned in six years to think little of theories which have no application; and the issue before us to-day is not whether the Indian was or was not wrong, but what is the best way to prevent his murdering the whites. What are the proper steps to secure our border? It seems pretty well settled that Congress | manders removable only by consent of the does not intend to do anything. The General Government, so far as absolute power is concerned, can do nothing more than lend the aid of a few regiments to act as escorts and repulse the bands when they make an attack.

Yet with this little power under its control it can, we believe, effectually quell these disturbances, and prevent the repetition of outrages by the Indians for many years to come. What is needed is an active, energetic, and uncompromising policy in the conduct of the war.

We have but little sympathy for the bloodhirsty proposition of Senator Tipton, that the Government should offer a reward for Indian scalps-although, coming, as he does, fresh from the scenes of butchery, we can imagine he had cause for his bitter proposition. We cannot conquer the Indians by turning Indians ourselves. It is only by adopting a plan of warfare entirely different from theirs that we will succeed. The good of the whole frontier, the protection of thousands of brave men, innocent wives, and helpless children, demand that some step be taken to to strike terror into the savage heart. Nothing but the most summary punishment can secure such a result. It has not yet reached a question of extermination, but unless by the firm hand of power these savages be checked, the people of the entire frontier will rise in their might, and kill without mercy those who are not punished because of the false sympathy of the people of the Atlantic States.

All the sympathy which we possess is felt for the poor settlers, who, taking their lives in their hands, seek in the West comfortable homes for their families. And we say deliberately that there had better be sacrified ten worthless lives of the lazy, roving, non-producing, all-consuming Indians, than one of our hardy workers, whose strength is our national strength and whose success is our national success. The irrepressible conflict between civilization and barbarism has been going on for centuries. Shall the advance of the former be delayed by a timid sentimentalism unworthy of men, and suited only for school-girls? We hope that with a firm hand the scalping-knife and tomahawk will be wrested from the warriors, and those who drew the one and unearthed the other be punished with death. If we do not desire to see the settlers made desperate, and take the law into their own hands, the stupid policy of the Government must be abandoned, and we must, as Sidney said, "Seek through the sword quiet rest in freedom."

Foreign Immeration.—The tide of foreign immigration to this country experiences no ebb. Over 3000 persons arrived in New York recently during one day. These numbers have just resorted to this method of putting must soon tell upon the laboring force of the candidates before the people for the first judi-country. Despite all our drawbacks, the United States is still the best country on the face of the earth for the laboring man.

> The Assassination Conspiracy to be Investigated.

GENERAL BUTLER succeeded in getting through the House of Representatives yesterday a resolution for the appointment of a special committee to investigate all the facts connected with the assassination of the late President Lincoln, with full power to send for persons, papers, etc., and to probe the matter to the bottom. Mr. Butler was made Chairman of the Committee, and with him are associated Mr. Shellabarger, of Ohio, Mr. Ward, of New York, Mr. Julian, of Indiana, and Mr. Randall, of Pennsylvania.

From the composition of the Committee we may expect that the mystery which has hitherto surrounded this great crime will at last be unravelled, so far as it is possible for human instrumentalities to accomplish that

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT. -- Mr. Ashley, of Ohio, has just introduced a proposition in the House of Representatives for an amendment to the Constitution, making ability to read and write the English language a qualification for voting after the year 1876, apportioning representatives according to population among the States, excluding prominent Rebels from office, guaranteeing the public debt, etc.

Some modification of the Constitution is doubtless necessary, but we think a more simple and comprehensive proposition than the above, guaranteeing to all citizens of the United States absolute equality before the law, in every State and Territory, would meet the necessities of the case, and give us a permanent settlement of our chief political diffi-

TRULY THE CASE of the man who travelled round the world unharmed and then broke his neck on his own door-step, is not without a parallel in real life. General Thomas Francis Meagher, after escaping the British bullets and bayonets in Ireland, and the British halter in prison, after passing through our American war, with all its battles, and going for two years unharmed amid the savages, falls from a steamboat and is drowned. Verily a prosaic termination for so eventful a career.

PROGRESS OF THE SURRATT TRIAL.-Some interesting testimony is being brought out by the defense in the Surratt trial. The calling of time in front of Ford's Theatre on the night of the assassination is sworn by two witnesses to have been done to apprise one of the singers connected with the theatre that it was time for him to appear on the stage. The party who is said to have called the time, and the person for whom it was called, both testify to this version of the affair.

MR. STEVENS' BILL .- Mr. Stevens' Supplementary Reconstruction bill was to be brought to a vote in the House of Representatives today, at 11 o'clock. The distinguishing feature of the bill is that it makes the District Com-Senate, or upon conviction by a court-martial of malfeasance in office.

MR. TRUMBULL'S BILL .- The Reconstruction bill submitted to the Senate by Mr. Trumbull, of Illinois, makes the action of the Military Commanders, in removing provisional civil officers, subject to the approval of the General of the Army. This would impose a definite responsibility upon General Grant, which he has hitherto apparently sought to avoid.

-Charles A. Shaw, of Biddeford, Me., an intimate acquaintance of Artemas Ward, will soon publish a book with the title, "Recollections of Artemas Ward."
